Sixth Sense

From the Pastor

Andrew Sullivan wrote in New York Magazine in late March, "It's quite possible that by the end of all this, almost every American will know of someone who has died. A relative, a friend, an old high school classmate ... this will change us. ... All plagues change society and culture ... with consequences we won't discover for years or decades. The one thing we know about (this) epidemic is that at some point it will end. The one thing we don't know is who we will be (when it does)."

I don't know when this will end. I don't know how long it will be before we return to our sanctuary. I don't know what will happen between now and then. But I believe this: this crisis, like all crises, can't afford to be wasted. Seth Godin says, in a crisis, "it's easy to abandon what we believe, because we assume that when things get back to normal, so will we. But we forget, the choices we make, even in a crisis, particularly in a crisis, shape who we are."

Things are not normal and our normal ways of caring for others, of caring for one another, are not always available to us. We can't get together, or share a meal, or even visit our friends in the hospital. It's a challenge, but it is also an opportunity. We can't afford to waste this crisis. This is a time to remember what matters most, what is needful, as Jesus said. I'm thinking about those of you who have children at home. Maybe in addition to teaching math and geography, maybe set some time aside to tell the stories that are important to your family. If your family or friends are scattered, maybe by phone or Zoom or FaceTime, reflect on the moments that have shaped your family. Or talk about moments in the lives of others that have inspired you and shaped what you value most. In a time of crisis, when everything seems to be shifting daily, we need to dig deeper into the truth that sustains us.

You are always in my daily prayers. Be safe. Be well.

Peace!
Vincent

What We're Reading / Watching / Listening To / Doing

David Bennett: Thomas Wolfe, a biography by Elizabeth Nowell. Coming to terms with my obsession for Wolfe and the deep impression he left on me. This is an early biography by someone who knew him fairly well. The biography included many revelations to me.

Cosette Cornelius-Bates: I'm watching Grace and Frankie. We've also been playing Rat-a-tat-cat

Sara DeLucia: Louie is reading the Spy Kids series by Stuart Gibbs (Spy School, Spy Camp, Evil Spy School, Spy Ski School...). Sadie reread the Percy Jackson and Heroes of Olympus books. Jesse is reading Disney Classics Golden Books.

Carol Emerson: Reading Dickens's Great Expectations and the Clinton's Gutsy Women. Listening to NPR and playing too much online Scrabble

Megan Fogt: Sweep: The Story of a Girl and Her Monster by Jonathan Auxier. Available with your library card on Hoopla, also local author...and last month's book club pick (I'm a bit behind)

Peter Gilmore: Not often enough, I'm playing my harmonica(s), trying to rebuild my fiddle/mandolin repertory of jigs, reels, hornpipes. Having finished reading All the Shah's Men, a gripping account of the 1953 US/British coup which overthrew a democratic government in Iran, I hope to get back to the interrupted reading of The Long Deep Grudge: A Story of Big Capital, Radical Labor, and Class War in the American Heartland. I try to remember to dip into Donald McKim's Coffee with Calvin: Daily Devotions. And I try to keep the birdfeeder filled! It's an endless delight watching the cardinals, finches, sparrows, nuthatches, towhees, and more, and even starlings and mourning doves cross paths around the feeder.

Patty Halverson: I am reading Louise Penny mysteries and watching The Last Kingdom

Kirk Howe: Writing and recording. Yesterday I finished recording a short work by the French composer Olivier Messiaen.

Lori King: Reading The Making of Asian America by Erika Lee; watching Call the Midwife and Somewhere South from A Chef's Life on pbs.

Sue Koehler: I just finished a powerful book that reminds us that Covid-19 is not our only health issue. It's by Pulitzer-winning journalist Eric Eyre – Death in Mud Lick: A Coal Country Fight against the Drug Companies That Delivered the Opioid Epidemic.

Gail Luley: Reading Fineas Finn and A Journal of the Plague Year. Watching Jane the Virgin.

Jenny Newman: Ready to dive into The Splendid and the Vile: A Saga of Churchill, Family, and Defiance During the Blitz by Erik Larson

Susan Rothenberg: I am watching for the first time all the seasons of Madame Secretary which is pure escapism, and I love it. I just finished A Very Stable Genius and am about to begin Michael Lewis's The Fifth Risk because I clearly don't love myself enough to stay away from books that are going to make me angry. Earlier in March, I read Dear Church by Lenny Duncan. It is "a love letter from a black preacher to the whitest denomination in the U.S." Highly recommend.

Amy Whipple: Malakai and I are nearly done reading The Hobbit with Harriet the Spy on deck. I'm finally reading Carmen Maria Machado's In the Dream House, which seemingly everyone I know read last year. I've very much been enjoying watching new episodes of One Day at a Time and The Good Fight. We continue to listen to Selena Gomez on repeat.

“Those who contemplate the beauty of the earth find reserves of strength that will endure as long as life lasts. There is something infinitely healing in the repeated refrains of nature – the assurance that dawn comes after night, and spring after winter.” —Rachel Carson

“But the discipline of blessings is to taste each moment, the bitter, the sour, the sweet and the salty, and be glad for what does not hurt. The art is in compressing attention to each little and big blossom of the tree of life, to let the tongue sing each fruit, its savor, its aroma and its use.” —Marge Piercy
