Sixth Sense

From the Pastor

In the Netflix series The Queen's Gambit, nine-year old Beth Harmon attends an orphanage where she is befriended by Jolene, who asks her, "What was the last thing your mother said to you? I like to ask that question." Beth also meets Mr. Shaibel, the custodian. He teaches her to play chess. She is a prodigy, and as a young adult she hits the national and then international stage as she strives to become the best chess player in the world. Her success in chess is equally matched by her lack of success in relationships, as this quiet, troubled girl lives life with little connection to others, save the pieces on the chess board, and substances on which she depends.

Fast forward a couple decades, Beth is at the top of her game in chess, but her life is directionless and falling apart. Out of the blue, Jolene knocks on her door. Jolene has followed Beth's rise to stardom, but was surprised by how undone her successful friend was. She says to Beth, "I'm here because there was a time you were all I had, and I was all you had. I'm here now because you need me." Even when the world looks at us and assumes we have it all together, we know in our own hearts we are fragile, questioning, and no one escapes the times of testing, especially one year into COVID. We know it acutely at times, but it's true all the time: We can't get through life on our own.

I hope in these hard, lonely days, when it never seems that masking and distancing are going to end, you found a way to be that Jolene for someone else in your life, and someone has been a Jolene for you.

Peace!

Vincent

What We're Reading / Watching / Listening To / Doing

Peter Gilmore: In fits and starts, I'm reading Old Gods, New Enigmas: Marx's Lost Theory by Mike Davis, a great writer and deep thinker. It's not "new" (having been published in 2018, but it's new to me. Plodding through a couple of other books, and (also in fits and starts) re-creating my repertory of Scottish and Irish dance tunes on the mouth organ.

Jen Joy: The girls and I binge watched Just Add Magic over the course of a week or so; I wish there was another season!

Kate Kennedy: Going thru all the books by Nelson Demille

Lori King: reading The Name of War: King Phillip's War and the Origins of American Identity by Jill Lepore

John McCall: At the end of the year, I read a truly delightful and rather profound, Irish novel by Nial Williams, This Is Happiness and several times Diane's prize-winning book of poetry, Perigee. Since then, Paul Knitter's, Without Buddha I could not be a Christian, Marcus Borg's Days of Awe and Wonder, and now I'm on Obama's A Promised Land.

Jenny Newman: Reading Little Theologians: Children, Culture, and the Making of Theological Meaning by David M. Csinos and the YA novel Clap When You Land by Elizabeth Acevedo. I just reread the Adventures of Huckleberry Finn for a book club. Listened to the podcast I Am Not a Monster from BBC radio about an American woman who takes her children to the Islamic States group's caliphate and how she ends up in an Indiana prison. Also just started watching The Americans tv series.

This request is coming to you from the Deacons asking for food or cash donations. Wilkinsburg Community Ministry is distributing Easter bags to families for their Easter dinner. We have had an ongoing relationship with them over the years from participating in a variety of collections to serving as volunteers and board members.

The current focus is using recipes to prepare healthy, specific dishes. Here is a list of some of the food items:

- * Mayonnaise: 20 oz.
- * Mustard: 14 oz.
- * White Vinegar: 16 oz.
- * Bread Crumbs: 24 oz.
- * Chicken Broth: 32 oz.
- * Russet Potatoes: 5 #
- * Corn Bread Mix: 1 box
- * Blueberry Pie Filling: 1 can
- * Blackberry Jell-O: 6 oz.
- * Crushed Pineapple: 8 oz.

If cash is your choice a Gift Card from the Giant Eagle is very useful. A personal check can be made out to WCM with Easter dinner on the memo line.
